Receives News of Death of Relative

Mr. J. Lawcock, received word recently of the death of his cousin, George P. Lawcock, at Peterborough, Florida. His death was due to monoxide gas poisoning. He was discovered by his wife in an unconscious condition in the garage where he had been at work on his car. She dragged him into the open air, but all attempts at resuscitation failed. He had been Sheriff of Cornwall for seven years and just previous to his death had received the appointment of Chief of the Police of Orwosso. The funeral service was one of the largest attended ever held in the county and evidenced the goodwill felt for the deceased man and his family.

Railroad Maintains Own Weather Bureau

So concerned are the Canadian National Railways with the vagaries of wind and rain, cloud and sunshine, heat and cold, that they maintain their own weather bureau. Every eight hours, day and night, clicking telegraph keys report to divisional headquarters throughout Canada, "what's doing" in the way of weather. The reports determine the temperatures of refrigerator and heating cars and also determine the crop yields to be harvested tomorrow by the railroad, so that, months before harvest time, nearly 40,000 grain cars can be distributed throughout the Prairies to handle the grain movement. Joseph Michael Niwa, sr.

The death took place at 11:40 a.m. today, of Joseph Michael Niwa, sr., prominent former of the Cleveland district.

Service At Cleveland

The Funeral Mass of Joseph Niwa, sr., will be held on Saturday, at 10:30 a.m., at the St. Peter and St. Paul, Catholic Church, Cleveland.

Poppy Day

The day we wear a Poppy in remembrance of those who offered their lives for others; some have lain in Flander's Fields for more than a decade, some for almost a score of years; others came home with wrecked bodies or minds; others in good health but with a memory marred by the sights of War and the anguish of their fellowmen.

A Remembrance Day — the day the Armistice was signed — each of us will want to wear a Poppy to show that we have not forgotten, nor do we want to forget for they, too, shall share the benefits of the culmination of that War. Today, many of the disabled soldiers are trying to uphold their self-respect by at least partially supporting themselves by making these little poppies. The Empire Chapter of the I.O.D.E., purchases these Poppies from the British Empire Soldiers Legion for a stated amount determined by them, and resells them to you for voluntary gift.

Will you do your part by buying and wearing a Poppy?

"Lest We Forget."

Blikewise affected and the loading of trains depends on the weather, since a sudden cold snap reduces by as much as 30 per cent the tonnage a locomotive can pull.

D. Lush was a visitor to Redcliff, Alta., on Tuesday.

Canada Is Entertaining Distinguished Visitors

Several Outstanding Men To Spend Some Time Here

Men and women who have achieved distinction in widely different walks of life were greeted at Quebec when they embarked from the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Britain.

Rare Crops Bring Rare Price

Farmers Who Try New Varieties Usually Have Success

The election of a new variety into an agricultural enterprise, and farming is no exception. It may be a combination of adverse conditions such as local drought that cuts short the grain crop, or the sudden drop in grain prices. Occasionally it may yield more than a bumper yield meets a buoyant market.

Those potato breeders in Scotland who received a £100,000 grant for research on an unusual crop, a few years ago, may be envied for their good fortune. It was not mere luck, however, that enabled them to patiently select and plant the tubers that were free from blight. They exercised their skill from a long period of time and secured their award.

Other varieties may be cited of farmers who by happy chance came upon an unusual crop. A few years ago, Montana potato growers last spring to linsus seed, which is imported from South America to feed canaries. They are now getting good prices for the tubers that are now considered a good prospect when other grains looked doubtful. In spite of the winds and dry weather, the potato crop thrived in the short growing season and the seed for several dollars a bushel.

These are bright spots in what is too sombre a picture of agriculture in 1931.

Great Improvement Shown

Judging In Community Progress Competition Has Been Completed

General improvement affecting all areas of rural life is reported in districts entered in the first community progress competition of the Canadian National Railways by Dr. W. J. Black, Director of Colonization, Agriculture and Rehabilitation for the railways company, who came to Montreal accompanied by Robert England, western manager of the department. Dr. Black has been in Alberta judging the judges in the community progress competition on the final inspection tour.

Judging in the community progress competition is now completed in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, but results are not yet announced. In the year just past all entries have been given careful consideration. Judges will confer with government officials in each province before making their decisions, particularly with the department of agriculture, public health and education.

Will Not Lose Anything

Two of the largest hotels in New York have agreed to accept Canadian money at par value despite its depressed condition. The announcement said the two hotels had accepted Canadian money at par even during the dark days immediately after the Great War, and would continue to do so regardless of the money's worth in United States funds.

Jurisdiction Extended

High Commission For Canada Now Controls All Immigration

Jurisdiction over all departments of the Dominion Government in the United Kingdom will be exercised by Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, High Commissioner in Great Britain. An order-in-council passed when Hon. P. C. Larkin was High Commissioner, and which gave to Mr. Larkin additional jurisdiction.

Those who go to church instead of sleeping there, the others spend most of Monday sleeping on the job," explained the boss. — Cincinnati Enquirer.

Hunt For Mysterious Gold

Indians Have Filed Claims At Government Office In Calgary

Gold discoveries northwest of the Morley Indian Reserve have shed some light on the mysterious trips of an aged prospector of Calgary who died last week without revealing much of his wealth. Twenty-five Indians from the reserve sped into Calgary in automobiles to file gold claims at the Government office. They said they were beginning to make claims 50 miles northwest of Morley which is 50 miles west of Calgary.

The Indian invasion recalled Calgaryst's mysterious prospector. Each spring the Indians would travel with Cochran or Morley, hire a pack horse and head northwards. A few months later he would return. Little sacks of gold burdened his pack horse. It was said to average return for the prospector's few months' work each year was $2,000.

The silent gold hunter decided to reveal his find to a soldier who had been a friend of his. The soldier informed the war veterans that he would like to keep his secret and where "you will make enough to keep you the rest of your life." Death claimed the prospector before the treasure hunt could start.

Now Indians have discovered gold in the same area. The new strike is around Fallers Timber Creek.

Prospectors are reported to have started on the trail of Indians to Alberta's latest gold strike have switched to optimism, and an exodus from Calgary to the Big Timber Creek area of the Bow River and gold was evident in some of the streams.

The discovery of an abandoned cabin, a rusty gold pan and a miner's pick lent legend to the discovery, similar to the rush of prospectors into the Loup River area of the Bow River near Calgary, in the spring of this year. Hope again rose that the lost Leman mine had been located. But wary prospectors saw the same illustration of the cabin to the Livingstone area. Unlike the spring rush, gold actually has been found.

Existence Is Justified

Farm Schools Have Their Place In Educational System

The registration at colleges in 1931 is larger than ever, despite the depression in business and the decline in numbers of young men seeking education is seen at the Ontario Agricultural College, and will doubtless be evident at the schools of agriculture as they are now. Farmers' institutes and clubs, too, are increasing in number, and the short courses offered by the Ontario Agricultural College, will be held in sizeable numbers.

During the past year, the Ontario Agricultural College has made up most attractive with the capitol expansion, and the buildings are spacious, you can make it with the short sleeves worn, the capes are chosen cotton while No. 2922 may be had in sizes 20 to 29. Size 36 requires 2½ yards of 36-inch material with % yard Wool crepe, tweed mixtures and caution crepe are appropriate.

Cut out pieces of 2½ yards or coin (coin preferred). Wrap coin carefully.

Fundamental Facts In Reference To The Gold Standard And Its Effect On International Trade

By H. G. L. Strange, Director, Research Department, Searle Grains Company, Limited, Winnipeg

The expression "Inflation Deficit" is the motto of England, "the Gold Standard," have been much written and talked about during the past few weeks, and inasmuch as an expert economist has given his opinion as to the respective benefits or defects of these economic policies, the plain person may be pardoned for being somewhat bewildered by it all.

Perhaps, however, a simple review of some of the fundamental facts upon which the majority of experts seem to agree may be of help at this time.

Canada, like most countries, the gold standard is prepared to pay their debts when due and demanded and to redeem their bonds, notes and bills in actual gold, if required. Countries not on the gold standard are not bound in order to protect themselves against the effects of the economic policies of the plain person may be pardoned for being somewhat bewildered by it all.

Perhaps, however, a simple review of some of the fundamental facts upon which the majority of experts seem to agree may be of help at this time.

The quoted exchange value of a country's currency, i.e., the pound, the dollar, the franc, the mark, etc., whether that country is on or off the gold standard, is simply the ratio of the value of the country's currency, or credit, in terms of gold.

The real "value" of any country's economy depends upon what it depends on to whether that country is officially on or off the gold standard, but certainly does depend on the main upon the credit of that country or in the faith of the world at large that its particular country will always pay its debts in full, exactly when due, and in some measure of confidence that is acceptable to both parties, or as a loan in terms of gold.

Naturally, knowledge that a certain country has a large amount of gold in reserve is good tangible evidence of ability to pay, hence of credit.

The country's balance of budget each year is also evidence that warrants faith. That a country is trading at a profit and has surplus funds available to invest in other countries year by year spending more than it can afford, or that country has valuable potential resources that can be developed to bring in wealth, are all reasons for which that country's credit will result in a high exchange value of that country's currency, whether it is on or off the gold standard.

In that case the real price of wheat or any other commodity, that is purchasing value in relation to all other commodities, will depend very little upon the rate of exchange, or unless the two countries are on the same gold standard, but will in the main depend upon the relationship of the supply and the demand of wheat or any other commodity, and will further depend also in some measure upon the purchasing power of those who need the commodity wherever they may reside, and the purchasing power of those who make dependent upon who buy up where ever in this world, they can sell the products of their own hands or brains at a profit. If they can do this they are sure to do it, whether they will be compelled and are willing to pay a fair price because they can afford it. If, however, they are unable to sell the products of their own hands or brains, they will not be able to buy up the commodity with which to purchase any commodity, and will only be able to afford those that are offered at a cheap price.

The prodigal son went wrong, but he came back all right.

Bakers' Pastry

Association Discusses Criticism That Cakes All Taste Alike

The taste of all bakers' cakes alike was discussed by several delegates at the convention of the Bread and Cake Bakers' Association at Montreal.

One baker said the moment he heard the criticism he thought of the fact that the taste of the cake was too much vanilla essence killing the taste of the eggs and butter. Another felt that the fault lay in the practice of adding the cake before it had cooled, so that the taste of the icing would be lost before it was put on the cake. Cakes and icing should be tasted together in the bakery to get the combined effect.

Another put forward the explanation that cakes were often prepared in carelessly without accurate measurements.

Bakers only supplied eight to 10 per cent of the cake consumed by the community, declared a delegate.

Canadian Fish For New York

Fish Freezing Process Going Forward

Commercial shipments of fresh Alaskan salmon and halibut, treated under the new "quick freezing" process of refrigeration, have now begun to market regularly. It is believed that the new method of freezing fish will be adopted by the traffic officials of the Canadian National Railways, and at least 20 carloads, each containing some 30,000 pounds of quick frozen fish will be shipped to New York via the Great Lakes lines between November 1 and the end of February. It was only last month that the first "quick frozen" fish ever handled between Alaska and the east were delivered in Groton, Conn.

Eskimo Needs Wife With Good Teeth

Chief Occupation Sees To Be Chewing Husband's Woodenware

Eskimo wives are not selected so much for beauty of face, or form, or the charm of mentality, but rather with special reference to the quality of their teeth and their skill in house work, says Dr. P. P. Poole, on his return to Nova Scotia from the Arctic. The Eskimos are practically as important as food, and good teeth are the first requisite of good tasting. The skins of the animals are stretched out to know to dry, and then, as far as is where the teeth come in—they are chewed and worked up until they are soft. This must be done before they are fat, and the fat is then added to the taste of the eggs and butter. Another fact that the lay in the practice of fastening the cake before it is fed to the children, so that the needle with its thread of carbon tendon can be easily taken out. Needles made of bone were at one time used, but of late these have given way to the regular steel needles which are now procured at the trading posts.

The need of good teeth is still necessary after the clothes are made, for the skin of the wife is to remove his wet skin clothing. This is promptly hung up by his wife. In the process of drying it becomes almost as stiff as wood, so that it can be used as a needle case, with which his husband can sew his妻's clothes as well as his own. This is the condition of pliability which will permit of further use. In fact the Eskimo woman appears to spend half her time in this task of mending her husband's woodenware, and it is unusual for the women in this country used to create such a condition of pliability as this.

It is obvious that the bachelor labour under a great handicap, and as males are considerably in excess there is a heavy demand for wives.

Credit For Drought Areas

Must Establish Credit Through Application To Bank Officer

Farmers in the drought areas of Saskatchewan need fodder must establish their credit through application to their local bank. The following instructions issued by the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture:

"The application which should be submitted to the bank committee. Distribution of the feed by the rural municipalities with them will be made in amounts not to exceed three tons of hay or other fodder per head of horses or cattle, less his supply on hand."

Orders will not be received direct by the Department of Agriculture. Under the new credit arrangement, the department will purchase hay and other fodder for rural municipalities, but the latter must no longer contract for fodder or feed grain or pay for same except where they may have contracts uncompleted. Mr. Robert stated that while on his visit to the west port he had been informed on good authority that $3,000 was saved in sending the men to the west instead of buying grain in the east, and that the cost of transporting to Fort William.

Mr. Robert, a well-known Canadian journalist and his father, a writer of prose and poetry, has for six years been a member of the press gallery at Ottawa.

Could Not Be Shamed

After receiving a petition "11 miles long" against the proposed bill granting Sunday movie, the English Government has decided not to push the measure in Parliament.

A total of 47,779 tons of German armament has been imported this season. British illuminous imports have reached 19,883, a reduction from last year of 15,662 tons.

Settlers For North

See Value Of Great Farming Community North of Elbow Parallel

Vision of a great farming community north of the 53rd parallel, as seen in the north as dozens of applications to take up agricultural land in various parts of the north have been made by the summer to the lands branch in Winnipeg.

With many settlers already established in four or five separate sections of northern Manitoba, there is great interest among the men of northern Manitoba to go on the land, and many from points in Saskatchewan and central Manitoba are turning their eyes northward. The situation state that many settlers as well as new applicants are handicapped on account of lack of capital. Those already settled on farms in the Far West have engaged to a great extent in truck farming, while a number are turning to dairying and poultry raising, the trend is towards mixed farming.

Abundant Crops For Next Year Predicted

Precipitation Figures Show Guarantee Of Sufficient Moisture For 1932

Prediction that next year will be above average throughout Canada next year, was made by Robert Henderson, mortgage corporation inspector, on his return to Ontario from a two-month tour of the west.

Conditions both on the farms and in the cities were not as black as had been painted, he said. Certain definite areas in southern Saskatchewan, however, will continue to experience difficulties, but he cited crop collections, butter production figures and bumper crops in the northern portions of the prairies as indications that things were not as bad as they appeared.

The peanuts grew up, produced doubtful plantings and multiplied.

That was four years ago. This year they may again put a fair crop in the prairie which seemed to grow equally well. Another year passed and he had quite a patch.

There were not such a great quantity of peanuts as the year before, but the peanuts were still growing.

Without the slightest knowledge of the science of growing peanuts or of soil and climatic requirements he planted over 100 bushels of peanuts old friends which turned up in his young home.

Has Success With Peanuts

Ukrainian Farmers In Ontario Planted Acres This Year

The St. Jacobs, Ontario, Reformer, says: "Norfolk grown cotton and tobacco!"

Alas peanut!

Not just a small garden patch of peanuts!

On the outskirts of the village of Waterford lives one, Sammy Zerlik, Ukrainian by birth, who has successfully raised and harvested an acre or more of peanuts.

Sixty acres of ten acres of land and growing a variety of the crop, but peanuts are his special pride and care.

He wants a strong, living, thing, like a peanut, for his wife, and he got the idea about growing peanuts.

One day he was in the city of Hamilton and from a street corner vendor bought a five-cent bag of peanuts. He opened the bag and found them and found the nuts in their natural raw and unroasted condition.

Not caring for peanuts of this kind, he threw the bag away.

The peanuts grew up, produced doubtful plantings and multiplied.

In highly optimistic and ringing tones, Premier R. B. Bennett emphasized Canada's unconquerable belief in herself, telling the Canadian Press that he spoke at the opening of the new home of the Canadian Club of New York, recently.

"Canada has an immense and unconquerable belief in herself," he declared, and with his remarks who cheered applause broke forth from his audience. "We have the faith that accepts good times as they are and bad times as they are; we have the courage to meet them when they come, and the determination to conquer them when they arise."

"In any kind of life there are veritable necessities in our pioneering lives, they are veritable necessities. Nor does it mean that Canadians are confused between the facts as they are and as they would have it."

"Our Prime Minister faced distinguished guests prominent in the professional and business life of the United States."

"I am not here to discuss the stats of affairs in Canada," Premier Bennett stated. "For the present, we are here to discuss the turn of events which may arise with the knowledge that however bad it may be, hard work by all our people, courage in every walk of life, and the spirit of co-operation which we have, will not fail to better our position."

He made no answer, but released her instantly, and in her anxiety to show him how well she could manage the hurried on, struck the tip of the stick she had been holding against a little bunch of frozen snow, and all but fell. He caught her as she stumbled.

"I think," he remarked drily, "you would do well to sacrifice your independence till your feet are on more equal terms with one another."

Jean laughed merrily.

"I think I should," she agreed merrily.

He led her to where the pram stood in a tiny corner of a seat of sorts, then bent in search of his skates. Returning in a few moments he knelt beside her and fastened it on—securely this time—to the slender foot she extended towards him.

"You're much too independent to be out and about in a seat like that," he said as he buttoned the last strap.

A faint flush of annoyance rose in Jean's cheeks at the uncompromising frankness of the observation.

"What are your friends thinking of to let you do such a thing?" he pursued, blushing furiously in indignation.

"I have no friends here. I am—my own mistress," she replied rather tartly.

He was still kneeling in the snow in front of her. Now he bent on his heel and inspected her face with a sharp swift scrutiny. "Almost," she thought, she detected a sudden visible suspicion in the keen glint of his eyes.

"We're going to sit down to be looking about—alone—at a hotel," he said at last, as though satisfied.

"How do you know what I like?" she retorted quickly.

"For a mademoiselle, I do not know what you are—but I do know very certainly what you are not. And—smiling a little—"I think we have just come across a girl of that sort that you're not accustomed to finding for yourself."

There was something singularly attractive about his smile. It lightened his whole face, contradicting the set, tilted grumpy look she had habitual to it. Jean found herself smiling back in response.

"Well, as a matter of fact, I'm not," she admitted. "I came here with my father, and he was—was suddenly

When many babies fidget and cannot seem to sleep quietly, look for one common cause, doctors say. Constipation is the greatest cause of the accumulated wastes which cause restlessness and discomfort. Give a cleansing enema to the baby, and you know, is made specially for children's delicate needs. It is a pure vegetable product, containing no harsh drugs, no narcotics. It is so mild and gentle you can give it to a year-old baby. It will bring relief as effective for older children. Castoria's regulating power will bring relaxation and comfort to your baby. called away. I am going on to stay with friends."

"This is my last day here," he remarked with sudden irreverence. "A lot of fine things are planned for me this morning."

"You're not stopping at the hotel, are you?"

He shook his head.

"No. I'm staying at a friend's chateau a little ways beyond it. Mais, voyons, monsieur, you must all catch cold sitting there. Are you too frightened to try the ice again?"

He seemed to assume that her next essay would be made in his company.

"Oh, no, I was supposed to have a lesson with Monsieur Grolet this morning. He is an instructor," she explained. "But he was engaged coaching—so you see what can't be done."

"And what is that, Monsieur Grolet? Can you see him?"

Jean's glance ranged over the scattered figures on the rink.

"Yes. There he is."

Her eyes followed the direction indicated.

"He seems to be well occupied at the moment," he commented. "Suppose you allow me to act as coach instead of you."

She hesitated. This stranger appeared to be uncompromisingly generous in his tendencies.

"I'm perfectly capable," he added firmly.

"I'm sure of that. But—"

His eyes twinkled.

"But would not be quite comm-if I fail?" Is that it?"

"I don't know if it wouldn't?" she retorted.

His face grew suddenly grave, and she noted that when in repose, there were deep, straight lines on either side of his mouth, a habit of his naturally, only thrown by nerves and fearing, either mortal or physical.

"Mademoiselle," he said quietly.

"To-day, it seems, we are two very different people. Couldn't we forget what's come before?"

"I suppose we shall never meet again. We know nothing of each other—just what's past in the night!" Let us keep our another company—take this life."

He drove a step nearer to her.

"Will you?" he asked. "Will you?"

He was looking down at her with eyes that were curiously bright and compelling. There was a tenement of the voice which made one shiver, that disconcerting tremor of consciousness tingling through her blood.

She knew that his proposal was not a simple one, even as she had expected from the stampings on the modern broad interpretation of the word convention, and that by every law of Mrs. Grundy she ought to shun him soundly for his presumption and return her steps to the hotel with all due speed.

But she did none of these things. Instead, she stood hesitating, alternately flushing and paling beneath the oddly concentrated gaze he bent on her.

"I swear it shall bind you to nothing," he pursued urgently. "Not even to recognizing me in the street should our ways chance to cross again."

"It is hard to say to nothing," with a shrug, "seeing that mademoiselle is that and I am that."

"I swear it shall bind you to nothing," he pursued urgently. "Not even to recognizing me in the street should our ways chance to cross again."

"It is hard to say to nothing," with a shrug, "seeing that mademoiselle is that and I am that."

"Very well. It shall be as you wish."

A rarely sweet smile curved the man's grave lips.

"Thank you," he said simply.

CHAPTER IV.

The Stolen Day

"Encore une fois! Bravo! That went better!"

Monsieur Grolet's underlay had amply justified his claim to capability. After a morning's tuition at his hands, Jean found her prowess in the art of skating far beyond what she was ever imagined, to master the mysteries of "cross-cuts" and "rocking turns," and a somewhat attenuated figure glided freely scored on the ice to her credit.

Her self-applauded lesson smiled. "Then I'm off to get some tea for you, too," he said, for "I'm not well, either," he replied. "But now—glancing at his watch, he called a half hour for lunch."

"Lunch?" Jean's glance measured the distance to the hotel with some dismay.

"But not lunch at the hotel," interposed her companion quickly.

Jean regarded him with curiosity.

"Where then, monsieur?"

"Up there!" he pointed towards the pine-woods. "Above the woods there

Young Woman Architect Predicts They Will Be Common

People who live in glass houses will be no more exceptional than those who live in brick, stone or wood ten or fifteen years from now, according to Margaret V. Van Pelt, young New York architect. Miss Van Pelt, who recently became a member of the Young Engineers of America, has returned to work in her New York office after a year studying trends in architecture in Europe.

There, Germans are building glass houses already," she explained. "I saw several of them. Of course the glass has to be of the strongest sort. They are using glass also to decorate interiors. It is transparent and gives a brilliant light."

"Glass, metal and strong colour contracts in decorating exteriors are the newest notes in building design," she said. "The tendency is to make glass effectively more marketable than in our American skyscrapers. City blocks in which pink, blue, beige and mauve coloured houses stand side by side are being erected."

"A hut of sorts—erected as a shelter for people living up from the lower valley to Mountain View beyond," she said. "It isn't a temporary sally-a manager. It isn't a long climb," she added persuasively. "Are you too tired to take it on after you've had a hard day?"

"I know that," she said. "But are you expecting a way-side refuge of that description to be miraculously endowed with a well-furnished ladder?"

"No. But I think my knapsack can make good the deficiency," he replied complacently.

Jean looked at him with dancing eyes. Having once yielded to the day's unceasing torture, she had renounced herself to the joys of the flesh.

"I know how she must shudder through the black abysses of night; in all the whirling universe.

No golden light!"

I know how she must ache for The signal-lights of dawn; But as dusk deepens she must know What bleak despair!

Cancer

Each of the various tissues of the body is made up of its own specific type of cell, all coming from one parent cell. Under normal conditions, these cells increase in number by dividing; they grow, they mature and they die. In some manner, how we do not understand, this growth of the cells is regulated and controlled.

When this control is lost or it is apparent that growth occurs which is, some cases, cancerous or malignant. Why and how this happens we do not know. What appears to be the case is that cancer arises in the normal cells of the body, if it were, growth would be wild.

Many theories have been advanced to explain the occurrence of cancer, which is another way of saying that there is no theory which is satisfactory or which is generally accepted. The disease is not hereditary. In any disease which is as common as cancer, several cases may occur in one family, but as far as we know, this is not due to heredity, nor has it been proved that any particular diet may influence the development of cancer.

Chronic irritation of some kind is frequently followed by cancer. The irritation may be mechanical, such as is caused by broken teeth or poorly fitting dental plates. The irritation of secretory and good prices not only acted as an inducement to those who were already keepers to enlarge their activities, but also encouraged many free from abuse. Constipation must be avoided, and any chronic inflammatory condition corrected by appropriate treatment.

In its early stages, cancer is a local disease. If, during that stage, it is completely removed, a cure results. The periodic health examination by the family physician allows for the early detection of cancer, and this is one reason why such regular examinations are advocated.

Many deaths which now occur from cancer could have been prevented had the cause come under treatment early. It is the delay which is disastrous. Since while a disease of forty years of age, discharges from the body, lumps in the breast, none of these signs should be neglected. Life itself depends upon giving attention to these warning signals. The condition may not be cancer, but if it is, treatment should be secured at once.

Honey and The Consumer

A few years ago the demand for honey in Canada was considerably greater than the supply, and because of this fact there was little or no difficulty in disposing of this product at fancy prices. The combination of secrecy and good prices not only acted as an inducement to those who were already keepers to enlarge their activities, but also encouraged many who otherwise were not interested, to enter the ranks of the honey producers, so that now the supply is in excess of the demand on the home market.

During the period of easy selling, the producer had things very much of his own way, it was not necessary for him to sort his honey into colour classes or to be so particular regarding its quality or the type of container that he used, for honey sold quite readily without much fussing about it. Today, however, there is much more keen competition in marketing, and the consuming public have become much more discriminating in their purchasing, so much so that the producer can no longer dictate the terms at which he will sell, but the consumer is now dictating the terms at which he will buy. Unfortunately, during the very selling periods, habits are formed which appear to be very hard to break, but which must be broken to successfully meet the new conditions.

Honey was packed in almost anything that would hold it, little or no attempt was made to grade it according to colour or quality, and it was practically all put under one common label of "Pure Honey." The consumer had no means of knowing the quality of what he was buying other than an examination of the contents of the container, nor had he any safeguard that the second purchase would equal that of the first. That these habits are hard to break is seen in the fact that under the present selling conditions they are continued to a considerable extent, for in 1929 out of 911,880 pounds of honey inspected, it was found necessary to regrade 29 per cent, and to reject 12 per cent of it, and of 253,000 pounds inspected during 1930, 18.8 per cent had to be regraded, and of 442,868 pounds 25,380 pounds had to be rejected. In present day selling the consumer's wants must be considered, and the producer who fails to recognize this fact cannot hope to successfully market his product—Experimental Farms Note.
